WHAT CAUSES DEAFNESS.

The Principal Cause is Curable but Generally Overlooked. Many things may cause deafness, and very often it is difficult to trace a caus some people inherit deafness. Acute diseases like scarlet fever sometimes cause deafness. But by far the most common cause of loss of hearing is caarrh of the head and throat. A prominent specialist on ear frou-bles gives as his opinion that nine out of ten cases of deafness is traced to stated but it is certainly true that more than half of all cases of poor hearing vere caused by catarrh.

The catarrhal secretion in the nose and throat finds its way into the Eustachlan tube and by closging it up very soon affects the hearing and the hardening of the secretion makes the loss of hearing permanent, unless the ca-

o use centains no cocaine or opiate and is as safe and pleasant for children as for their elders.

"You are frightened, my dear young lady! Don't be alarmed; you will get on very well. Stand upon the platform, please, and settle firmly on both feet; do not hang your head, but keep it up naturally. Hold up your head, I say. You stoop too much; put your arms behind your back, so that the chest may be free. Now, take breath No, not so! That was but a half-breath. You must take a deep breath, and not expel the breath too rapidly. No, that will not do. I will count. While taking breath I shall count ten: while holding it, five; while slowly expelling it, ten. Good, very good! Now open your mouth. Why that grinning smile? That gives the voix blanche—the white voice, the tone striking the soft palate. open your mouth naturally; the lower jaw must be depressed, as the upper jaw is metionless. Good. Now attack the tone by drawing together the youal cords; take care that when you attack it no air comes forth; do not strike the tone so hard. That is an avergranted come departs and wands exaggerated coup de glotte, and sounds harsh. Strike the tone once again. That is right. Now let us study the passage from one register to another. Try to sing the last tone of the chest register so softly as possible, so that the transition to the middle register to harsh. Strike the tone once again. That is right. Now let us study the passage from one register to another. Try to sing the last tone of the chest register so softly as possible, so that the transition to the middle register be imperceptible, and do likewise in respect to the transition from the middle to the head register. It is not to be expected in the beginning that the registers be connected and made even. but attention must be directed to that through practice. Sing for me first two, then three, then four, then five topes.

Good! That will be sufficient for taday. During the first month do not practice at home, so that I may keep watch of your breathing, your attack. and your passage from register to reg ister; it is impossible that, in a single lesson, you should comprehend the method, and through misdirected study you might undo all I have taught you. Remain here, however, and follow the instruction imparted to other pupils; you will learn much thereby, and what is strange today will become familiar, by listening, tomorrow. This first hour's

Those who are hard of hearing may think this a little far fetched, but any one at all observant must have notice I how a hard cold in the head will affect the hearing and that catarrh if long neglected will certainly impair the sense of hearing and ultimately cause dearness.
